I am now 49 years old, and have suffered for the last fifteen years with a lung trouble. I have spent thousands of dollars to arrest the march of this disease, but temporary relief was all that I obtained. I was unfit for any manual labor for several years. A friend strongly recommended the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), claiming that he himself had been greatly benefited by its use in some long troubles. I resolved to try it. The results are remarkable. My cough has left me, my strength has returned, and I weigh sixty pounds more than I ever did in my life. It has been three years since I stopped the use of the medicine, but I have had no return of the disease, and there are no pains or weakness felt in my lungs. I do the hardest kind of mechanical work, and feel as well as I ever felt since I was a boy. These, I know, are wonderful statements to make, but I am honest when I say that I owe my existence and health to-day to S. S. I would be recreant to the daty I owe to humanity if I tailed to bear this cheerful testimony to the merits of this wonderful medicine.

A HOTEL LOBBY "JEDGE."

Says a Washington special: The President's order, excluding office seekers and public men, except when they have public business with him, will probably be revoked at the end of the month. It was made to give the President time to prepare his message. He will try in future to keep out the He will try in future to keep out the office-seckers, but he recognizes that it would be impossible to restrict public men in their coming to see him or to make them specify in advance their business with him. Senator Vest and William R. Morrison to-day made a very vigorous talk in the Private Secretary's room, protesting against the order. When they went in to see the President and found him alone for the first time since he has been in the White House, they came away with a better opinion of the order.

A Washington special to the New York Commercial Advertiser says: The President will probably recommend in his message that the coinage of the $2,000,000 a month be stopped, and that the old trade dollars that are now outstanding be bought up and coined into halves and quarters. He will probably recommend, as a concession to sliver interests, that half dollars be coined in larger quantities, but that their weight be made greater, so that they will represent a value in metal somewhere ap-proaching the imprint upon their face. This change from the dollar to the half, it is said, would be greatly in the interest of the silver men.

Washington hotel lobbies have some queer people among their habitues, says Austin of the Times-Star. A character well known about them is 'Jedge' Riley, whose native State is Virginia, but whose coming to Washngton is not within the memory of the oldest inhabitant here. The "Jedge" claims an acquaintance with every Virginian of prominence one can mention. and when one arrives at a hotel here he s of course recognized by the Judge, though the recognition may not be re-ciprocated. "Hon. So and so is an old friend of mine, and I recommended him to come to your house," is the way the "Jedge" usually springs it on the hotel clerks, and as a rule they are obliged to thank him for his consideraobliged to thank him for his considera-tion. But it was left for Clerk Brown-ell of Willard's to get a horse on "Jedge" Riley the other day. While passing through a small town in Virginia on his way to Washington, Congressman Lawler of Chicago tele graphed Mr. Brownell that he would arrive within a few hours. Judge Riley was at the desk of the hotel when Mr. Brownell opened the dispatch. Mr. Brownell opened the dispatch. "There," said the clerk, handing the missive to Riley, "is a telegram from your State; do you know the gentleman who is coming?" "Let me see," replied the "Jedge," "Lawler, Lawler; oh, yes; I know him well; he's one of our ablest lawyers; by the way, I remember now that I recommended him to put up here; he's an old friend of mine." Brownell could not suppress Brownell could not suppress man as well as the paragrapher, and is a smile, which gradually overspread his countenance and by degrees de-veloped into a chuckle of the most proone of the most abused of Government servants. But why revile the Governnounced type. "Don't see what you're smiling about," said the Judge, as he walked away; "Lawler's a Virginian from away back and a first-class felment clerk? Is he not human and is he not entitled to live? And who would not be a Government clerk if he got the chance? It's a mistaken idea to hold that when one enters the Department he leaves the world and am-bition behind and thinks of nothing ex-Says Crawford of the World: Secre ary Lamar, in his fight with the ring cept office and drawing his salary. Take his 'tips' on the races and you'll come out ahead every time. As to politics and lobbying, he has been there. And society? What would it do without him! Studious? Yes. A stranger visiting Washington will often hear of a sun-down doctor and will ask it's meaning. And when he's told it's fighter of Mr. Lamar's neighborhood when the latter was a mere boy. This fighter was a planter by the name of James B. Zackery. His dialect and exploits were most happily described by Mr. Lamar at a recent dinner. Zackery, in his best days, whipped every-thing before him. One day young La-mar asked the fighter to give him the secret of his success. He said: "Zack-ery, it can't be that you are bigger and stronger than everybody." Zackery realied: "Well Lights I lost explains it's meaning. And when he's told it's a government clerk, who has gradu-ated in medicine, and who practices ery, it can't be that you are bigger and stronger than everybody." Zackery replied: "Well, Lucius, I jest explains it this yer way: When I goes into a fight I takes a good swar that I'me goin' to stay right thar! Mr. Lucius," added he; "fightin' is, I reckon, the most tire-somest business there is. When the other feller begins to get his tire on, then your stayin' right thar will beat him shore." It was Zackery who, in condoling with his profession after office hours, he seems surprised and says is it possible Yes, and a large number of clerks graduate every year from the law schools with honors and are only waiting for an opportunity to make a start in their noble profession. When they have saved a sufficient amount of their salaries, to warrant them in resigning their clerkships, they make for the growing towns of the West, where they establish themselves and in a few thar will beat him shore. It was Zackery who, in condoling with a neighbor who had lost a good and faithful wife, said: "I am sorry for you; I know of nothin that ungears a years they come to Congress. Not a few are clever artists, and in fact, it would be difficult to tell in which art one or more clerks don't excel. You man so as to lose his wife." Towards the close of his life Zachery experienced the close of his life Zachery experienced religion. As he was lying upon his death-bed a neighbor came in and said: "Well, Zachery, you will have to go soon, I am told," "As is agreeable to natur," was his polite and conservative reply. When asked if he thought his sins were all forgylen, he said, with even greater conservatism: "I reckon the heft of them are." WEST WASHINGTON.

The entertainment at Curtia Hall last night for the beneft of St. John's P. E. Church was one of the most brilliant affairs of the season. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity by the clite and fashion of Georgetown. The programme was arranged by the young people of the parish, and was such a decided success that many expressed the wish that it would be repeated. The May pole dance, or the 'Possant's Merry-making,' as it was termed, was executed by fourteen young ladies and gentlemen in picturesque costumes; surrounded by floral decorations and handsome stage settings. The effect was very beautiful and elicited rounds of appisuse. Miss Dorsey, under whose supervision the dance was gotten up, was the recipient of a handsome foral tribute. Miss Barter never looked pretiler than she did in her bright and attractive costame. The programme concluded with the langhable comedy in three acts, entitled "Married Life," in which Mr. A. Ferguson and F. G. Moffat kept the house in a roar. The other characters were well represented, and did credit to the ladies and gentlemen taking part. A fine orchestra under the leadership of Professor Doneh Inruished the music. # FACTS AND FANCIES.

A great many people firmly believe that a good location is an absolute requisite to success in business, and have a superstitious dread of starting where others have failed, either through misfortune or imcompetence. These fancies are the veriest nonsense. From our standpoint the only benefit to be derived from a good location is that it may be within easy reach of the general public. Business wherever started, if properly conducted, is bound to succeed. Such a business MAKES the location; the location alone never yet made the business. When we were about to open at the N. W. Cor. of 7th and D Sts, a number of otherwise sensible men advised us not to touch the place-it was an unlucky corner, &c., &c. The advice was kindly meant and received in the spirit in which it was offered, but we quieted their fears on our account by informing them we knew the causes of the failure of those who had gone before us. THE PLACE HAD NOTHING TO DO WITH IT. We filled the first and second floors of the building with the best selected stock of Clothing for Men and Boys ever exhibited in the District of Co lumbia. We marked our Goods as low as it was possible to sell them and live, and the result is we are to-day doing the largest business that was ever done at the N. W. Cor. 7th and D Sts. We have had to replenish our stock again and again, and to-day we opened fifteen cases of Men's and Boys' Clothing to replace what we have sold within the last ten days alone. Luck is the coward's shield; energy and attention to the wants of patrons are the beacon lights for which every business man who would be successful must steer.
